Europe Army Snagged

PARIS, Nov. 15 (AP)—(Exclusive) Plans for creation of a European defense army struck a serious snag tonight as a result of disagreement over its organization.

The discord became evident at the start of a meeting of high-level representatives of European army powers at the French foreign office.

The meeting was attended by French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman, Belgian Foreign Minister Paul Van Zeeland, Netherlands Foreign Minister D. U. Stikker, Luxembourg Foreign Minister Joseph Bech, Paolo Togliatti, Italian secretary of state and a representative of the Bonn government, Prof. Hallstein.

Authoritative sources said Van Zeeland led the Benelux group (Belgium, Netherlands and Luxembourg) in opposing organization of the European army on a completely integrated basis.

SAME PAY, UNIFORMS

Such organization would eliminate the national character of the various military units and provide that all troops wear the same uniform and enjoy complete equality in respect to pay and living conditions.

The Benelux nations prefer a coalition basis for the proposed army, providing for the assignment of national units under the ultimate control of their respective governments.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, who will be in overall command of the proposed army, firmly supports an integrated force, but high-ranking officers at Allied headquarters have started wondering whether this position will prevail.

B.C. Oil Stock Snapped Up In New York

VANCOUVER, Nov. 15 (CP).—A $3,500,000 transaction today on the New York Stock Exchange was heralded by finance men here tonight as a vote of confidence in British Columbia's future as an oil-producing province.

They were commenting on the over-subscription of a common stock issue of 500,000 shares in Canadian Atlantic Oil Co. Ltd.

Investment dealers here said they could not remember an instance where stock subscription of a western Canadian oil had sold so quickly on the New York market.

The transaction followed by two weeks the discovery of oil at the No. 1 well near Fort St. John in the Peace River district of B.C. "The New York over-subscription proves beyond a doubt that the big financiers believe the B.C. discovery is most significant," said a prominent member of the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

Property at the well-site of the first oil struck in quantity in B.C. is held by Canadian Atlantic, Pacific Petroleum Co. Ltd., Union Oil Company of California and Sunray Oil.

Unconstitutional---and Worse

THE FUNCTIONS of the courts of this country are not only to enforce the laws but also to direct attention to those which may be irregular or against public interest. In this respect Judge Sullivan of the New Westminster County Court has performed a distinct service in his condemnation of one of the powers exercised by the milk board under the authority given to the board by the provincial government.

In Judge Sullivan's view compulsory grading of raw milk below the butterfat content of the natural product is unconstitutional. His Honor expressed that opinion after quashing the conviction of a Cloverdale dairyman against whom the only crime imputed by the milk board was that of selling superior milk, containing 6 per cent more butterfat than the board's regulations allow. This in a day when the efforts of animal husbandry are bent towards improving the quality of milk.

Judge Sullivan allowed the dairyman's appeal because of certain technical failures of the prosecution unrelated to the essential ingredient of the case, which was the standard of the milk. Consequently the personal opinion he volunteered as to the unconstitutionality of the case did not form part of the judgment. It is unfortunate that this is so, for it would have been valuable to the public to have the court's opinion inserted in

Wisner Endorses Milk Board Power

Attorney General Gordon S. Wisner disagreed yesterday with the opinion of a New Westminster judge that the power of the B.C. Milk Board to fix the butterfat content of milk is illegal.

Judge Harry Sullivan Wednesday quashed the conviction of William E. Crawford for selling too-fat milk.

Weather Hits Korean Front

EIGHTH ARMY H.Q., Nov. 16 (Friday).—Rain, low clouds and freezing temperatures blanketed the Korean battlefield Thursday, shielding Red targets from Allied air attack and cutting ground activity to a minimum.

He dismissed the case, not because of "illegality" of milk board powers, but because he felt the prosecution had failed to establish the ownership of the milk tested.

But, he added, "If it was necessary, I would say the power of the milk board is unconstitutional in this case."

Said Mr. Wisner: "We don't accept the view that the milk board is ultra vires. We think it is intra vires."

He added: "Further prosecutions will ensue if there are any further violations of the Milk Act."

Colored Margarine Backed by Committee

Coloring of margarine before it reaches the consumer is favored by the Chamber of Commerce civic affairs committee.

The stand was decided on after lengthy discussion at a meeting yesterday afternoon.

"If people want it colored, there's no reason why it shouldn't be," said Reginald Hayward, who said he definitely favored the holding of a plebiscite in which citizens could express their opinion on the matter.

The group also dealt with the proposal that Victoria's city council be reduced in size.

In the end, the matter was tabled.

Alderman Frank Mulliner and Alderman Percy Scourrah each claimed few people fully realized the amount of work required of the council.

Troops Home From Korea

By TREVOR COLLINS

It was a slow boat from Japan. But for 200 Canadians arriving home from the fighting zone in Korea, it was a trip they will never forget.

The huge American troop transport, Pte. Joe P. Martinez, slipped quietly under the Lions Gate Bridge at Vancouver yesterday afternoon to complete a 21-day voyage from Japan.

Aboard were the 200 Canadians and 2,000 American fighting men who have been in Korea for about 12 months.

For the Canadians the port of Vancouver was a welcome sight. Flanked by four tugs and escorted by the Vancouver fireboat, the dirty-grey ship slowly nosed her way into the C.P.R. dock.

FIRST ASHORE

Amidships were the Canadians who were the first troops of Canada's 25th Infantry Brigade to land in Korea.

They were lined up in three ranks aboard the ship, the same vessel on which many of them sailed to Korea last year.

The Americans, who still had to sail to Seattle, were lining the rails in confusion.

Backed by the Vancouver Firemen's Band, more than 50 newspaper men and photographers went aboard the ship. Friends and relatives were blocked off at this point.

Fifteen minutes later the troops rushed ashore. Lining up, they marched through downtown Vancouver to the courthouse.

Vancouver opened its heart to the veterans. Streets were lined five deep in places. Police made a half-hearted attempt to keep traffic moving.

ISLAND MEN

Swinging their arms and looking proud were four Vancouver Island men in the parade. They were Pte. George H. Burnett, 23, of 1932 Tupac; Pte. W. E. Cox, 688 Beach Drive; Pte. Lawrence E. Orchin, 24, of 315 Edward; and Pte. Edward McKenzie, 25, of 350 Robinson Street, Nanaimo.

At the courthouse, Mayor Fred Home, Brig. W. J. McGill and Premier Byrnes Johnson greeted the men during the march past.

Later at the Seaforth Armory the crucial moment arrived. The men marched in and stood stiffly at attention. Welcome speeches were made. Probably the most significant word of welcome was made by the officer who commanded the troops on their long trip.

WELCOME ORDER

Standing proudly at the head of the parade Major D. W. Grant of Vancouver said:

"This is what you have been waiting for for a long time—dismissed."

For the men, who had friends and loved ones waiting, it was an order they readily obeyed.

There was one mad dash at the armory. Then there were tears and kisses.

After welcoming them from the elevated platform at the armory, Premier Johnson mingled with and talked with the men.

"Glad to see you home. You did a good job," he said to Pte. Cox.

FREE BEER

The army went to a lot of trouble to make sure the fighting men would be comfortable. Despite the beer strike there was a free pint for those who wanted one. That included nearly everybody.

After the reunion the men boarded buses and were taken to Jericho Beach army headquarters for the tedious documentation procedure.

Some men complained that this should have been done aboard ship during the 21-day trip. But the army went to work with a will and had the business cleaned up in a matter of hours.

Then the men headed for the troop train that speeded them to their home towns. Vancouver Island men headed for home aboard the first available means of transportation.

In Korea, all the services of the United States and the United Kingdom were available to Canada. If Canada tried to duplicate what others were doing, that would depart from the type of joint operation the United Nations were conducting there.

Atrocity Tale From Korea Brings Probe

Ridgway Orders Interview With Officer Who Told Story

TOKYO, Nov. 16 (Friday). (AP)—Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway today ordered a full investigation of the story of Communist slaughter of Allied war prisoners released Wednesday by an Eighth Army legal officer.

The supreme Allied commander ordered his press information officer, Col. Patrick Welch, to interview Lieut. Col. James M. Hanley in Pusan. It was Hanley's statement that the Reds had killed more than 5,500 American prisoners created a world stir. Hanley is chief of the judge advocate's section of the Eighth Army.

Ridgway also ordered Col. Welch to speak with Col. Kenneth L. Booth, Eighth Army public information officer. Lieut. Col. Hanley had said the Eighth Army passed the story.

Ridgway's headquarters said there would be no official comment on the story until the investigation is completed.

Lieut. Col. Hanley has been reprimanded, a United Nations officer in Tokyo said. It was later explained that it was not at this stage an official military reprimand.

Official action would await completion of the investigation which the U.N. command ordered.

The investigation of the circumstances of Lieut. Col. Hanley's statement, so far, have shown that it went through lower channels of the Eighth Army's censorship system, and in the same way passed through the command's press advisory division in Tokyo. From there it was disseminated by the news agencies.

The information in Hanley's release does not even seem to have been available in Tokyo.

Opposition Members Call For Auxiliary Services

OTTAWA, Nov. 15 (CP).—Several Opposition members, veterans of either the First or Second World Wars, today urged the government to provide auxiliary services for Canadian troops in Korea.

Major George Hees (P.C., Toronto-Broadview), a veteran of the last war, said in the commons that a soldier's worst enemy is not fear—it is boredom and discomfort.

"I think there never was a battleground in which that was as true as it is in Korea," he said.

Capt. Howard Green (P.C., Vancouver-Quadrant), Capt. Charlie Gillis (C.C.F., Cape Breton South), Major E. D. Fulton (P.C., Kamloops), and Lieut. Col. Gordon Churchill (P.C., Winnipeg—South Centre) said Canada should provide recreational and educational facilities for the men in Korea.

Defense Minister Brooke Claxton said the suggestions will be given careful consideration. Conditions in Korea are "very different" from those in Europe and the force fighting there also differed from that in Europe in many respects.

In Korea, all the services of the United States and the United Kingdom were available to Canada. If Canada tried to duplicate what others were doing, that would depart from the type of joint operation the United Nations were conducting there.

None of the high Canadian officers in Korea had asked for any additional facilities, he said. The discussion occurred during study of a resolution to a bill making several technical

Victim Rests Comfortably

Mrs. Florence Freeman, Hagen Road, was reported to be resting comfortably in Resthaven Hospital last night after receiving scalp lacerations in a West Saanich traffic accident Wednesday evening.

Mrs. Freeman was a passenger in a car with Mr. and Mrs. H. Esler, Beach Drive, Saanichton, that was in collision with an automobile driven by J. Barrington-Boam of 2826 Colquitz.

The accident occurred just inside the Saanich municipal boundary.

All Passengers Die in Crash

CHAMBOUR-LAC, France, Nov. 15 (AP).—A U.S. Air Force flying boxcar, lost two days ago in swirling snow, rain and fog, was found crashed and burned today on the snow-mantled Mont Dore range. All the 36 Americans aboard were killed.

Woodsmen Sparing This Tree

This giant cottonwood tree will remain standing despite recommendation by City Engineer Cyril Jones that it should come out. Mr. Jones has told public works committee and council that rebuilding of Blanshard Street hill will be impaired by roots of tree. Motion to preserve the tree squeezed by with 6-5 vote at last meeting. "Middle-of-the-road" curb in background will be moved to within six feet of wall at left of picture.—(Colonist photo by Bud Kinsman.)

To Poll on Open Sundays

Victorians on the voters' list thereby carrying the motion to will get a chance Saturday to say whether or not they favor a civic vote on the question of permitting commercial sports and theatres to operate on Sundays.

It was decided yesterday at a meeting of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, that the organization would set up four booths downtown on Douglas Street to collect signatures.

ALLABOARD

By G. E. Mortimore

Housewives can cut down backache by copying the posture of the man drinking at a bar with one foot on the brass rail, according to an American doctor.

The brass rail helps a man to relax, says Dr. Earl McBride of Oklahoma City Hospital.

"When you put one foot on it, your spine curves forward into a restful position. That's why I tell housewives to put one foot on a little stool while ironing."

So comes scientific confirmation of a theory which many barflies have held for years. With his foot on the brass rail and his elbow on the mahogany, the barfly is perfectly at ease.

If he stays in that position long enough—as a few barflies do—he slides gently to the floor and stays there. He is a picture of relaxation. Every muscle in his body is relaxed. This back gives him no pain at all.

While he is standing up, signs of the approach of this alcoholic Nirvana may inspire the bartender to say "No more for you, Mac." Bartenders are notoriously ignorant about medical discoveries.

In British Columbia, the stance recommended by the American doctor is possible for housewives at the ironing board, but not for drinkers. The brass rail is in disgrace. Only a person planted in a chair may legally consume the wares of our beverage rooms. If he rises to drink a toast he is breaking the law.

The doctor did not dwell upon the sitting position as an aid to relaxation. Presumably he assumed that the average housewife has no time to sit down. He was wrong. Many housewives spend a good part of their day sitting down to hear soap operas, follow quiz programs or read love stories. That is one reason why woman's work is never done, I suppose.

I think it is much more relaxing to sit, even in the austere and ugly chairs of our beer parlors, than to stand.

On his feet, the drinker feels complete relaxation overtaking him, and if he is wise, he goes home. In a chair, he is more likely to stay put until someone convinces him that his presence is no longer needed. By that time, he may be so relaxed that he can't stand, and the gendarmes carry him away in a closed wagon.

A housewife is likely to be impatient with her husband when he comes home in such a state of relaxation. It makes no difference if she has followed the doctor's advice and propped her foot on a little brass rail all day. Housewives can be most intolerant about things like that.

Yet some women get the same emotional lift from drinking in a radio brew of tears and soap as some men get from hoisting a beaker of suds. The home is their saloon and the radio is their bartender. A brass rail under the ironing board would make the analogy complete.

Naval Aims Outlined By Creery

VANCOUVER, Nov. 15 (C.P.)—An extensive naval development program costing $2,000,000 is planned to strengthen the Royal Canadian Navy and protect Canada against invasion, Rear-Admiral Wallace B. Creery, Flag Officer for the Pacific coast, told a Canadian Club luncheon today. He predicted that by 1953 Canada would have a naval strength of 100 ships and 100,000 men.

At all costs, he said, "We must prevent the next war from being fought on our soil."

He said that Canada now is re-equipping all its reserve vessels, in addition to building new ones.

The best method of dealing with the submarine menace is the sole purpose of which is to hunt for and destroy submarines, he stated.

Admiral Creery said that the Canadian navy has become part of a whole international protective system.

He paid tribute to the American navy for its co-operation and also to the R.C.A.F. for its transport service.

Probe of Chaining Rumor Ordered

CANBERRA, Nov. 15 (Reuters)—Army Minister Josiah Francis today ordered an immediate investigation into a report that an Australian soldier was chained to the wall in a Canadian jail in Seoul, capital of South Korea.

The allegation was made by a soldier at a meeting of the Korea Veterans' Association in Melbourne Wednesday. The soldier later told army officials he heard the story second hand and did not know the man's name.

Francis today conferred with the former commander-in-chief of Commonwealth forces in Korea, Lieut.-Gen. Sir Horace Robertson.

who said he knew nothing of the matter.

The soldier is reported to have said an Australian court-martial sentenced the man to 28 days' detention, and he was sent to a Canadian military jail. A few days later the Canadians chained his hands and feet and put him in solitary confinement, the rumor said.

According to the returned soldier, the man was killed in action two days after his release.

"It is not right that Canadians should be allowed to chain our men. They ill-treated our men because they hate our guts. It is a well-known fact that New Zealanders have been chained by Canadians in Pusan," the returned soldier said.

In the speech from the throne in Cairo yesterday, the Egyptian parliament was told that no pressure or coercion could deter that country's campaign to get rid of British forces in the Sudan and the Suez Canal zone.

The speech made no mention of the Middle East defense project proposed by the U.S., Britain, France and Turkey. Rejected by Egypt a month ago, the plan is still a burning issue in the Arab world.

Labor politicians have been blamed for criticism of the B.C. Labor Relations Board. Wilfrid Heffernan, counsel representing 17 major B.C. employer groups, said in Vancouver "the labor board has been criticized by Labor men who are trying to make political capital out of it."

An Edmonton audience last night heard George Drew, Progressive Conservative party leader, say a "vigorous and aroused" public demand is needed to force the federal government to cut non-defense expenditures.

The Canadian Army's 74th casualty list of the Korean war, issued at Ottawa, reports two men killed in action, seven wounded, and one dead of wounds. One of the wounded men is A. Cpl. Robert Sobol, whose wife lives in Vancouver.

Purchase of Trucks By Railways Scored

HARRISON HOT SPRINGS, B.C. Nov. 15 (CP).—Truck operators in convention here today were told that the purchase of independent truck lines by Canadian railways will mean "sky high" freight rates.

Protest against railway purchase of truck lines was made by members of the Canadian Automotive Transportation Association.

Executive secretary John Magee, speaking to delegates representing 18,000 truck operators, said:

"The goal of higher rail freight rates can be achieved if the railways succeed in buying out independent truck lines and making them extensions of their system."

He said that truck competition drastically increased the freight rate increases the railways seek from

Swedish Author Given Nobel Prize, Physics and Chemistry Awards Split

STOCKHOLM Nov. 15 (AP).—Four scientists who are architects of the atomic age and an author whose best-selling novel is laid in the time of Christ, won 1951 Nobel prizes today.

Sir John Cockcroft, 54, director of Britain's "atomic city" at Harwell, and Professor E. T. S. Walton, 48, of Dublin's Trinity College, shared the physics prize.

They won the prize for their work as a team in 1932, when their experiments in splitting atoms in the United States, won crowns, about $32,337. In the case of the joint awards, the money is split 50-50.

The money for the prizes was donated by Alfred Nobel, the place on the Cross.

The cash value of the prize in Prizes are awarded by the Swedish Academy of Science.

Each field is 167,612 Swedish Kronor.

...THE FILTER TIP

— constant protection

for your throat

WHAT THE FILTER TIP DOES

It stops particles of tobacco getting into the throat.
It is the common-sense method of preventing smoker's throat because it effectively retains irritants.
It guards physical fitness.
It brings out the flavour and makes the smoke delightfully sweet and cool.

When the flame is put to your du Maurier cigarette, the miracle of the filter-tip begins. For the choicest tobacco cannot be enjoyed until that tobacco is burned. And in that burning will not some harshness, some impurity, be born to mar the natural flavour? It will—but from a du Maurier it will not pass your lips. The du Maurier filter-tip is there on duty, custodian of perfect enjoyment, guardian of luxury.

Selling Canada Short?

There will be little difficulty in arriving at the primary reason why Canadian government securities today are selling still further below par on the bond market. It is because the Dominion treasury, which promised Canadian citizens in two war-loan and nine victory-loan drives that Canada's bonds "could always be placed on the counter and redeemed at par," is not keeping its pledge. Whether the government is trying by this means to force security holders to retain their debentures until maturity dates, or trying by overt methods to stiffen credit rates and reduce civilian borrowing, is wholly beside the point. For those who through stress of circumstance may be forced to liquidate their holdings of Canadian bonds now the result will be precisely the same as a capital levy. It may be wrapped up in pretty words by apologists for this course, but the result will be just as plain and as crude as that.

Up until last spring the Dominion supported the bond market by buying orders through the Bank of Canada at par for any excess of securities that was being offered beyond the capacity of the normal market to accommodate. When through the Bank of Canada that support was withdrawn, Canadian issues fell overnight by several points. A further drop reported this week suggests that the government has taken out whatever pegs were retained on the bond price level. Again the value of prime Canadian holdings is dropping, and once more the original pledge of the Dominion—repeated in every national bond drive 11 times over—is being blandly ignored.

It becomes a question now whether the intent of this indirect curb against inflation can outweigh in the long run the very evident and immediate damage that is being done by the government breaking its given word. People of means can well retain their debentures until the maturity dates, and so need lose nothing. It is not so with the general public, however, and it is there that this watering down of a Canadian pledge to the lending public will work much mischief. What is the national treasury trying to establish by such hidden means? Why should it lead the way in selling Canada short?

Warning the Wrong Party

When a civilian motorist goes to the trouble of overhauling a truck and cautioning its driver for what in his view was a breach of traffic regulations he deserves the thanks and not the censure of the law. Assertedly met with abuse for his pains the motorist reported the incident to the police, who laid a charge against the driver of the truck. While it would be a matter of evidence as to whether or not the defendant in such a case had broken the law, and in this instance the defendant was acquitted, there was nothing in those facts, if correctly reported, to justify what amounted to a reprimand to the complainant, coupled with the hint of prosecution. Far beyond the letter of any law in importance is its spirit.

The rights of a civilian in matters of law enforcement cannot be taken out of their whole context. It is a legally established fact that any civilian can be called upon to help the police in the prosecution of their duty in a time of need. Failure to do so can be, and often has been, met by prosecution for obstruction of a peace officer. While nothing in that empowers any individual to take the law into his own hands, surely a distinction must be drawn in favor of those who try to issue a friendly warning and follow that by reporting the incident to the law itself. If such public-spirited action is to be met by condemnation, and indeed the threat of prosecution, the law may well arrive at the point where it will have to whistle for its friends.

Ottawa Shows the Way

THE CALGARY ALBERTAN recently printed the following excerpt from an editorial appearing in The Ottawa Journal: "It is a pleasure to observe and record some definite progress in the long-delayed matter of ridding downtown Ottawa (as a beginning) of its ugly service poles and its maze of overhead wiring." To this The Albertan added: "We are sorry the same cannot be said for Calgary."

We are even more sorry that nothing at all can be said for Victoria. In this city there is not so much as a beginning or even interest in an approach to one, let alone the "definite progress" noted in Ottawa. And this notwithstanding the fact that each year sees the dangerous and unsightly fences of tall poles and live wires extended, to add to the problems and expense of removal and burial which ultimately must be undertaken.

Clerical Revolution

By JOHN HARRIMAN

BOSTON—Our's is the age of the machine and of that small group of men who understand the machine's secrets, the engineers. It is their skills which assure us our standard of living. Our national defense rests upon their collective intelligence. To a large extent the future course of our material civilization is in their hands.

Now this future which our engineers are forming for us promises to be quite different from the present, and we are already hearing the phrase,

"Second industrial revolution." By this, of course, is meant a vast broadening and extension of industrial techniques which will change the pattern of our economic, social, and even political existence. Such changes have occurred before. The first puffs of steam appeared in England shortly after the middle of the 18th century, and in France only a few years later.

The energy they represented was to take forms and find outlets other than economic. Steam brought a new type upon the business horizon; the manufacturer, who was shortly to elbow aside the older types of sea merchant and financier. It was an aristocratic society into which this manufacturer emerged, a society of manners which sought serenity rather than progress. But the newcomer was irreverent of custom and contemptuous of tradition. Brashly he pushed his way to the centres of economic and, eventually, political power, demanding liberty for the individual and free play for the laws of nature. In him was born modern individualism.

Today we again watch as equally explosive forces gather at the direction of engineering minds in the laboratories of technical schools and large corporations.

An entirely new source of energy has been discovered in nuclear fission, which may free man in a geographical sense from those sources upon which he has hitherto been forced to depend, hydro-electric power, coal, oil and natural gas.

It is possible that heat and cold may be produced by harnessing the sun's heat.

In a land where fresh water is becoming increasingly a problem, sea water may soon be made potable, as well as usable for irrigation.

Engineers are now in process of creating machines which might be said to "think" for us, and which in the near future may perform much of the more monotonous work now done by men.

"It isn't unreasonable to look forward to the reality of a completely mechanized, robot assembly line. And electronic devices, as control mechanisms, as thinking machines, and as measuring machines—are going to be the absolute heart of increasing mechanization and automatization of industry." The words are not those of some writer of science fiction. They were spoken by Marvin J. Kelly, executive vice-president of the Bell Telephone Laboratories and one of the country's outstanding engineers.

Now is it only on the assembly line of the factory that these electronic robots may take over.

Using the term "clerical revolution," the well known research and engineering firm of Arthur D. Little, Inc., of Cambridge, has called attention to what the giant electronic computers may do in the realm of distribution.

It is now possible to build such a machine which will, for instance, make out customers' bills for a department store, keep inventories up to date, and provide statistical information for the store's buyers by sorting merchandise into tag—all automatically, through simply feeding into the machine the name of the customer, the merchandise purchased, and the salesman's name on a punched tag.

If all the repetitive clerical work involving customers' accounts, inventories, payrolls, tax deductions, and statistics could be done by machines, the result would be comparable to the advantage of machine tools over hand labor on production. The techniques of electronic computers grafted onto those now employed in such machines as cash registers and automatic accounting machines, and onto devices now under development, can be used to effect a virtual clerical revolution.

Steam created the "first" industrial revolution by introducing a new application of energy which resulted in the factory system.

Today it is the science of nuclear physics which is leading us on a path toward a new form of energy, and the science of electronics which promises a new freedom from human toil.

This, of course, brings us to the question as to whether this "second" industrial revolution will usher in social and political changes as profound and far-reaching as did its 19th century counterpart.

No one can answer such a question, of course. All that can be said is that history teaches that economies is often the great fashioning force of modern societies, and that a society undergoing economic change is therefore perforce a changing society.

One may see cause for hope on reason for foreboding. Mankind today suffers many shortcomings which no amount of scientific or technical skill can cure or even alleviate. Indeed, the great need of man today is the discovery of a meaning to existence above and beyond his own narrow self-interest, and it may be doubted that the engineering mind is especially equipped to provide any such meaning.

"That candidate who kissed baby must have lost his deposit—he just gave baby a whack with his umbrella."

International Commentary . . .

Conditions of World Disarmament

By WALTER TAPLIN, from London

WHEN President Truman, speaking on the three-power proposals for disarmament at the time of their publication on November 7, said that there could be no optimism that the Russians would agree to them, he was making a statement which no reasonable man with the experience of the past six years before his eyes could fairly question.

But the world seems inclined to take this comment at more than its face value. In fact, there is a tendency to assume that the only alternative to optimism is pessimism. That is not what Mr. Truman said; it is not what any responsible government could possibly believe, and its implication that opinion can only swing from one emotional extreme to another is a clean contrary to the cool and realistic tone of the statement itself.

The problem of disarmament is a problem of great inherent technical difficulty and that difficulty has been greatly added to by the appearance on the scene of atomic weapons. It has been steadily overlaid in the past six years by a growing mass of political difficulties, nearly all of them of Russian origin. And the proposal for the disclosure of forces and weapons, which the three-power statement puts first on the list, cannot be implemented at once, for the simple reason that a war in progress in Korea and must end before conditions for an arms census can exist at all. These are the difficulties. These are the facts that inhibit optimism. But formidable as they are, there is nothing in them that should have put the possibility of ultimate solution completely out of the court.

A reference to the actual development of the problem since 1945 can help to drive this fact home. The undertaking, in the preamble to the Charter of the United Nations, that the peoples concerned will "ensure, by the acceptance of principles and the institution of methods, that armed force shall not be used, save in the common interest" was backed up, so far as the Western powers were concerned, with an enormous measure of disarmament from the wartime level. It was during the period when their forces were being rapidly run down, and when the newly-developed atomic bomb had assumed for the U.S.A. and its allies a quite outstanding importance as the one major weapon they retained, that announcement was made of the so-called Baruch Plan of 1946, under which all the processes of atomic energy production would be put under international control. At that point a small gesture on the part of the Russian government would have opened the way to a solution of this most delicate disarmament problem of all. Instead, the military discussions within the United Nations bogged down on the distinct question of "conventional armaments", which was plainly secondary at that time, in view of the fact that the Western powers were ridding themselves of conventional armaments and dismissing their war-time forces at a very rapid rate.

It is since that date that the political difficulty of Russian hostility to the Western powers and the military difficulty of war in Korea have developed. But it is essential to remember that the Western powers have never ceased to regard these developments with regret and dismay, and to attempt to reverse them by all possible means, if only for the sake of ridding themselves of the unwelcome burden of rearmament and all the expense and dislocation it involves. It should be particularly plain at this moment, when some of the consequences of rearmament have just been brought home to the British people in the form of cuts in food imports and a check to the capital construction program, that any return to the relatively simple military situation, as it appeared in 1946, would be greeted with profound relief.

It is clear from the text of the three-power proposals that the object was to get back to a relatively simple military question—though not an absolutely simple one, for disarmament by international agreement can never be that. The obstacles mentioned in the proposals—the Korean war and the major political issues which have divided the world were simply presented as obstacles which can and must be overcome. Indeed it was made clear that the major issues, other than Korea, might be settled simultaneously with the program for the regulation and limitation of armed forces and armaments. It was also pointed out that, although the United Nations plan for international control of atomic energy and the prohibition of atomic weapons should be the basis for the atomic aspects of a general disarmament program, the possibility that a better and more effective plan could be devised need not be ruled out. Again, the provision that the process of disclosure and verification of forces should proceed in successive stages is an obvious device for recognizing the fact that the task is a very large one but that its difficulties can be broken down stage by stage with a progressive narrowing of the problem as a whole.

The opportunity for a reasonable Russian reply, if only in the shape of a request for further information, was given. Mr. Vishinsky scorned the opportunity in a bitter speech. The three-power statement was completely free from hostile propaganda phrases and was launched at a time when the United Nations were gathered together in Paris for the sixth session of the General Assembly, and the circumstances were exceptionally propitious for close personal contact and continuous clarification of proposals. It is already pretty clear that a more detailed statement of the three powers' views on the methods of disarmament could have been produced if the Russian reaction had warranted it.

The Packsack

OF GREGORY CLARK

YOU can employ the science of phenology in driving your car. Look at the back of the head of the driver in front of you.

If he has a flat-topped head, like a toad, with close set ears and a short neck—watch out! He is an arrogant and lawless driver. He is liable to tramp on his brakes any minute, in order to look in a store window as he passes. He is likely as not to swerve violently, in order to bypass another car, in doing which he will probably get into difficulty with oncoming traffic, and have to jam on brakes. If you jump him, he will bail out, all arrogance and fury, and blame you, of course.

The next easiest type to diagnose by phenological art is the tall, pointed head-type, with long neck and jug ears. These are the methodical type, who believe in progressing by jerks. At standstills, they start very slowly. Their reflexes are slow. It takes them a few seconds to realize that the light has really gone green. Then, with hands as long and fumbling as their heads, they grope about for the controls, with a jerk, they set themselves in motion. Block by block, they proceed in fits and starts, now speeding hotly, now slackening down, to roll along at a hoarse pace. The point heads are erratic drivers. One thing in their favor is, if you do bump them, they are meek as Moses, and sit there while you rant, swallowing their adam's apples.

Big heads as a rule are masterful and reckless drivers. Small heads are to be trusted to do the obvious thing, whatever it happens to be at any instant in the ceaseless change of traffic.

Alas, it is only with men drivers that you can employ phenology. With their hats and their hair-dos, women succeed in concealing their head shapes, so that it is safest, with women, to avoid either science or intuition.

Oh, Chuck It

(From The Wall Street Journal)

AT our house the other evening we had frankfurters for dinner. It was interesting how it came about.

At breakfast there was some mention of a chuck roast. That reminded us that The Butcher Workman, official publication of the A.F.L. Butcher's Union, defines the chuck simply as that part of a beef carcass "lying between the neck and shoulder blades down to the fifth rib of the forequarter," but that this definition didn't satisfy the O.P.S. The O.P.S. thinks housewives ought to have a better definition so they can check on what the butcher gives them.

So the price agency hauled off and wrote its own guiding definition:

"Regular chuck means the portion of the cross cut chuck remaining after the severance of the forequarter and brisket from the cross cut chuck, and containing most of the blade bone (scapula), part of the (humerus) arm bone, part of the five ribs (1st to 5th inclusive), that section of the backbone attached to the ribs and the neckbone (cervical vertebrae) from 1 to 7 inclusive, which portion shall be obtained by a cut through the cross cut chuck made in a straight line perpendicular to the contour of the outside or skin surface of the cross cut chuck (thereby separating the brisket and forequarter from the cross cut chuck) starting at a fixed point on the inside of the fifth rib determined by measuring off ten (10) inches along the 5th rib in a straight line from the centre of the protruding edge of the 5th thoracic vertebra, continuing in the same straight line to the tip of the forward end of the breast bone (forward end of 1st segment of sternum), and passing through the (humerus) arm bone in the same straight line to complete the cut."

We suggested that our dutiful meat shopper take this up with the butcher (A.F.L.) and to be sure we got regular chuck by going armed with a ruler to measure ten (10) inches to the 5th rib and a T-square to be sure that the cut was made perpendicular to the contour of the outside of the skin surface of the cross cut chuck so that we would have all of the scapula and part of the humerus without any brisket mixed up with the cervical vertebrae.

We were lucky the butcher sold us the frankfurters.

Fun, Fact and Fiction

Government officials tend to be slim, in the opinion of a noted anthropologist. Which may explain Winston Churchill's hitherto inexplicable capacity for work. He is really four thin men standing close together.

Suggesting that some day women may run the world, a Yale scientist hastens to add that this "isn't a prediction, nor even a warning." Nor even news.

A Washington correspondent says President Truman acts as if anybody who snipes at one of his supporters is really aiming at him, which is the way the deer must feel occasionally while the hunters are shooting one another.

It was their first quarrel, and the sordid subject was money. "Before we were married," she cried bitterly, "you told me you were well off."

"I was," he snarled, "but I didn't know it."

Even if you don't read, a library is a pleasant spot these days. The number of places where peace and quiet are the rule is getting smaller and smaller.

Selling Canada 'Short'?

PUTTING two and two together, the public will have little difficulty in arriving at the primary reason why Canadian government securities today are selling still further below par on the bond market. It is because the Dominion treasury, which promised Canadian citizens in two war-loan and nine victory-loan drives that Canada's bonds "could always be placed on the counter and redeemed at par," is not keeping its pledge. Whether the government is trying by this means to force security holders to retain their debentures until maturity dates, or trying by overt methods to stiffen credit rates and reduce civilian borrowing, is wholly beside the point. For those who through stress of circumstance may be forced to liquidate their holdings of Canadian bonds now the result will be precisely the same as a capital levy. It may be wrapped up in pretty words by apologists for this course, but the result will be just as plain and as crude as that.

Up until last spring the Dominion supported the bond market by buying orders through the Bank of Canada at par for any excess of securities that was being offered to accommodate. When through the Bank of Canada that support was withdrawn, Canadian issues fell overnight by several points. A further drop reported this week suggests that the government has taken out whatever pegs were retained on the bond price level. Again the value of prime Canadian holdings is dropping, and once more the original pledge of the Dominion—repeated in every national bond drive 11 times over—is being blatantly ignored.

It becomes a question now whether the intent of this indirect curb against inflation can outweigh in the long run the very evident and immediate damage that is being done by the government breaking its given word. People of means can well retain their debentures until the maturity dates, and so need lose nothing. It is not so with the general public, however, and it is there that this watering down of a Canadian pledge to the lending public will work much mischief. What is the national treasury trying to establish by such hidden means? Why should it lead the way in selling Canada short?

Warning the Wrong Party

WHEN a civilian motorist goes to the trouble of overhauling a truck and cautioning its driver for what in his view was a breach of traffic regulations he deserves the thanks and not the censure of the law. Assertedly met with abuse for his pains the motorist reported the incident to the police, who laid a charge against the driver of the truck. Far beyond the letter of any law in importance is its spirit.

The rights of a civilian in matters of law enforcement cannot be taken out of their whole context. It is a legally established fact that any civilian can be called upon to help the police in the prosecution of their duty in a time of need. Failure to do so can be, and often has been, met by prosecution for obstruction of a peace officer. While nothing in that empowers any individual to take the law into his own hands, surely a distinction must be drawn in favor of those who try to issue a friendly warning and follow that by reporting the incident to the law itself. If such public-spirited action is to be met by condemnation, and indeed the threat of prosecution, the law may well arrive at the point where it will have to whistle for its friends.

YOUNG LIBERALS

Sir—After reading the big headlines on the front page of The Colonist in Sunday's issue, "Young Liberals Aim to Scuttle Premier," I can not refrain from writing a few lines regarding same. The write-up in connection with the secret session held by the B.C. delegates during a full in the National Young Liberal Federation Convention gives a sad picture of the state of affairs inside the organization of the Liberal Party in British Columbia.

At such conventions enthusiasm runs high but is short-lived as after the delegates return to the communities they represent, they seem to disappear and little is heard of them until the next convention when the pot is stirred up again and something more is added to it.

I am of the opinion that the charges made on this occasion are too serious to be allowed to drop and it is up to the Young Liberal Association to follow up such statements with vigor and to lay their investigations before the Young Liberal Association.

I may humbly say that I am a Liberal of many years standing and I will not desert the ship of Liberalism and all it stands for just because the ship is experiencing rough weather at this period; furthermore the two deserters of the ship are the members who had a severe attack of nerves, and who are now chasing rainbows.

If only more of our young citizens would take an active interest in the administration of provincial, municipal and civic affairs, it would make this province far happier to live in.

THOS. TREDAWAY,

THE NIGHT WATCH

Sir—The solution to the police problem would be the Corps of Commissioners, to which I belonged in Calgary. Our commandant was Police Chief Ritchie, who briefed and swore us in as special constables. We patrolled every part of the city, every hour from 8 p.m. to 4 a.m., and had police box keys to call headquarters every hour for check-up. This cost the city nothing. Stores, warehouses, apartment buildings, car lots and houses paid monthly protection by check or our collections, which would run from a dollar to three dollars (during depression), and was divided into wages as a whole. This gave the city 50 or 100 efficient, alert, extra police protection as we had all the power and keenness of the police except the pay, which could increase or decrease according to the public spirit.

We captured and were the means of apprehending many a hardened criminal, who was convicted for several years. We were on call for any emergency. I had a ring of keys to various warehouses, stores, etc., who wanted the commissionaire to walk through them every time he came around, and have had to call the fire department on occasions. Some of us carried revolvers in a shoulder holster. I carried a long piece of hose with lead.

At first a few bad actors got into the corps, but were weeded out, until a very efficient police force developed. We were hand in hand, and actually part of the city police force, keeping in touch with the patrol wagons and headquarters; anything suspicious was reported immediately.

Clerical Revolution

By JOHN HARRIMAN

BOSTON.—Our's is the age of the machine and of that small group of men who understand the machine's secrets, the engineers. It is their skills which assure us our standard of living. Our national defense rests upon their collective intelligence. To a large extent the future course of our material civilization is in their hands.

Now this future which our engineers are forming for us promises to be quite different from the present, and we are already hearing this phrase,

"The energy they represented was to take forms and find outlets other than economic. Steam brought a new type upon the business horizon; the manufacturer, who was shortly to elbow aside the older types of sea merchant and financier. It was an aristocratic society into which this manufacturer emerged, a society of manners which sought serenity rather than progress. But the newcomer was irreverent of custom and contemptuous of tradition. Brashly he pushed his way to the centres of economic and, eventually, political power, demanding liberty for the individual and free play for the laws of nature. In him was born modern individualism."

By this, of course, is meant a vast broadening and extension of industrial techniques which will change the pattern of our economic, social, and even political existence. Such changes have occurred before. The first puffs of steam appeared in England shortly after the middle of the 18th century, and in France only a few years later.

Today we again watch as equally explosive forces gather at the direction of engineering minds in the laboratories of technical schools and large corporations.

An entirely new source of energy has been discovered in nuclear fission, which may free man in a geographical sense from those sources upon which he has hitherto been forced to depend, hydro-electric power, coal, oil and natural gas.

It is possible that heat and cold may be produced by harnessing the sun's heat.

In a land where fresh water is becoming increasingly a problem, sea water may soon be made potable, as well as usable for irrigation.

Engineers are now in process of creating machines which might be said to "think" for us, and which in the near future may perform much of the more monotonous work now done by men.

"It isn't unreasonable to look forward to the reality of a completely mechanized, robot assembly line. And electronic devices—as control mechanisms, as thinking machines, and as measuring machines—are going to be the absolute heart of increasing mechanization and automatization of industry." The words are not those of some writer of science fiction. They were spoken by Marvin J. Kelly, executive vice-president of the Bell Telephone Laboratories and one of the country's outstanding engineers.

Nor is it only on the assembly line of the factory that these electronic robots may take over.

Using the term "clerical revolution," the well known research and engineering firm of Arthur D. Little, Inc., of Cambridge, has called attention to what the giant electronic computers may do in the realm of distribution.

It is now possible to build such a machine which will, for instance, make out customers' bills for a department store, keep inventories up to date, and provide statistical information for the store's buyers by sorting merchandise tags—all automatically, through simply feeding into the machine the name of the customer, the merchandise purchased, and the salesman's name on a punched tag.

If all the repetitive clerical work involving customers' accounts, inventories, payrolls, tax deductions, and statistics could be done by machines, the result would be comparable to the advantage of machine tools over hand labor on production. The techniques of electronic computers grafted onto those now employed in such machines as cash registers and automatic accounting machines, and onto devices now under development, can be used to effect a virtual clerical revolution.

Steam created the "first" industrial revolution by introducing a new application of energy which resulted in the factory system.

Today it is the science of nuclear physics which is leading us on a path toward a new form of energy, and the science of electronics which promises a new freedom from human toil.

This, of course, brings us to the question as to whether this "second" industrial revolution will usher in social and political changes as profound and far-reaching as did its 19th century counterpart.

No one can answer such a question, of course. All that can be said is that history teaches that economics is often the great, fashioning force of modern societies, and that a society undergoing economic change is therefore perforce a changing society.

One may see cause for hope, or reason for foreboding. Mankind today suffers many shortcomings which no amount of scientific or technical skill can cure or even alleviate. Indeed, the great need of man today is the discovery of a meaning to existence above and beyond his own narrow self-interest, and it may be doubted that the engineering mind is especially equipped to provide any such meaning.

International Commentary . . .

Conditions of World Disarmament

By WALTER TAPLIN, from London

WHEN President Truman, speaking on the three-power proposals for disarmament at the time of their publication on November 7, said that there could be no optimism that the Russians would agree to them, he was making a statement which no reasonable man with the experience of the past six years before his eyes could fairly question.

But the world seems inclined to take this comment at more than its face value. In fact, there is a tendency to assume that the only alternative to optimism is pessimism. That is not what Mr. Truman said; it is not what any responsible government could possibly believe, and its implication that opinion can only swing from one emotional extreme to another is a clean contrary to the cool and realistic tone of the statement itself.

The problem of disarmament is a problem of great inherent technical difficulty and that difficulty has been greatly added to by the appearance on the scene of atomic weapons. It has been steadily overlaid in the past six years by a growing mass of political difficulties, nearly all of them of Russian origin. And the proposal for the disclosure of forces and weapons, which the three-power statement puts first on the list, cannot be implemented at once, for the simple reason that a war is in progress in Korea and must end before conditions for an arms census can exist at all. These are the difficulties. These are the facts that inhibit optimism. But formidable as they are, there is nothing in them that should have put the possibility of ultimate solution completely out of the court.

A reference to the actual development of the problem since 1945 can help to drive this fact home. The undertaking, in the preamble to the Charter of the United Nations, that the peoples concerned will "ensure, by the acceptance of principles and the institution of methods, that armed force shall not be used, save in the common interest" was backed up, so far as the Western powers were concerned, with an enormous measure of disarmament from the wartime level. It was during the period when their forces were being rapidly run down, and when the newly-developed atomic bomb had assumed for the U.S.A. and its allies a quite outstanding importance as the one major weapon they retained, that announcement was made of the so-called Baruch Plan of 1946, under which all the processes of atomic energy production would be put under international control. At that point a small gesture on the part of the Russian government would have opened the way to a solution of this most delicate disarmament problem of all. Instead, the military discussions within the United Nations bogged down on the distinct question of "conventional armaments", which was plainly secondary at that time, in view of the fact that the Western powers were ridding themselves of conventional armaments and dismissing their war-time forces at a very rapid rate.

It is since that date that the political difficulty of Russian hostility to the Western powers and the military difficulty of war in Korea have developed. But it is essential to remember that the Western powers have never ceased to regard these developments with regret and dismay, and to attempt to reverse them by all possible means, if only for the sake of ridding themselves of the unwelcome burden of rearmament and all the expense and dislocation it involves. It should be particularly plain at this moment, when some of the consequences of rearmament have just been brought home to the British people in the form of cuts in food imports and a check to the capital construction program, that any return to the relatively simple military situation, as it appeared in 1946, would be greeted with profound relief.

It is clear from the text of the three-power proposals that the object was to get back to a relatively simple military question—though not an absolutely simple one, for disarmament by international agreement can never be that. The obstacles mentioned in the proposals—the Korean war and the major political issues which have divided the world—were simply presented as obstacles which can and must be overcome. Indeed it was made clear that the major issues, other than Korea, might be settled concurrently with the program for the regulation and limitation of armed forces and armaments. It was also pointed out that, although the United Nations plan for international control of atomic energy and the prohibition of atomic weapons should be the basis for the atomic aspects of a general disarmament program, the possibility that a better and more effective plan could be devised need not be ruled out. Again, the provision that the process of disclosure and verification of forces should proceed in successive stages is an obvious device for recognizing the fact that the task is a very large one but that its difficulties can be broken down stage by stage with a progressive narrowing of the problem as a whole.

The opportunity for a reasonable Russian reply, if only in the shape of a request for further information, was given. Mr. Vishinsky scorned the opportunity in a bitter speech. The three-power statement was completely free from hostile propaganda phrases and was launched at a time when the United Nations were gathered together in Paris for the sixth session of the General Assembly, and the circumstances were exceptionally propitious for close personal contact and continuous clarification of proposals. It is already pretty clear that a more detailed statement of the three powers' views on the methods of disarmament could have been produced if the Russian reaction had warranted it.

The Packsack

OF GREGORY CLARK

YOU can employ the science of phrenology in driving your car. Look at the back of the head of the driver in front of you.

If he has a flat-topped head, like a road, with close set ears and a short neck—watch out! He is an arrogant and lawless driver. He is liable to tramp on his brakes any minute, in order to look in a store window as he passes. He is likely as not to swerve violently, in order to bypass another car, in doing which he will probably get into difficulty with oncoming traffic, and have to jam on brakes. If you jump him, he will bail out, all affronted and fury, and blame you, of course.

The next easiest type to diagnose by phrenology is the tall, pointed head type, with long neck and jug ears. These are the methodical type, who believe in progressing by jerks. At stop-lights, they start very slowly. Their reflexes are slow. It takes them a few seconds to realize that the light has really gone green! Then, with hands as long and fumbling as their heads, they grope about for the controls; with a jerk, they set themselves in motion. Block by block, they proceed in fits and starts, now speeding hotly, now slackening down, to roll along at a leisurely pace. The point-heads are erratic drivers. One thing in their favor is, if you do bump them, they are meek as Moses, and sit there while you rank, swallowing their Adam's apples.

Big heads as a rule are masterful and reckless drivers. Small heads are to be trusted to do the obvious thing, whatever it happens to be at any instant in the ceaseless change of traffic.

Alas, it is only with men drivers that you can employ phrenology. With their hats and their hair-dos, women succeed in concealing their head shapes, so that it is safest, with women, to avoid either science or intuition.

Oh, Chuck It

(From The Wall Street Journal)

AT our house the other evening we had frankfurters for dinner. It was interesting how it came about.

At breakfast there was some mention of a chuck roast. That reminded us that The Butcher Workman, official publication of the A.F.L. Butcher's Union, defines the chuck simply as that part of a beef carcass "lying between the neck and shoulder blades down to the fifth rib of the forequarter," but that this definition didn't satisfy the O.P.S. The O.P.S. thinks housewives ought to have a better definition so they can check on what the butcher gives them.

So the price agency hauled off and wrote its own guiding definition:

"Regular chuck means the portion of the cross cut chuck remaining after the severance of the forehand and brisker from the cross cut chuck, and containing most of the blade bone (scapula), part of the (thumerus) arm bone, part of the five ribs (1st to 5th inclusive), that section of the backbone attached to the ribs and the neckbone (cervical vertebrae) from 1 to 7 inclusive, which portion shall be obtained by a cut through the cross cut chuck made in a straight line perpendicular to the contour of the outside or skin surface of the cross cut chuck (thereby separating the brisket and forehand from the cross cut chuck) starting at a fixed point on the inside of the fifth rib determined by measuring off ten (10) inches along the 5th rib in a straight line from the centre of the protruding edge of the 5th thoracic vertebra, continuing in the same straight line to the tip of the forward end of the breast bone (forward end of 1st segment of sternum), and passing through the (thumerus) arm bone in the same straight line to complete the cut."

We suggested that our dutiful meat shopper take this up with the butcher (A.F.L.) and to be sure we got regular chuck by going armed with a ruler to measure ten (10) inches to the 5th rib and a T-square to be sure that the cut was made perpendicular to the contour of the outside of the skin surface of the cross cut chuck so that we would have all of the scapula and part of the thumerus without any brisket mixed up with the cervical vertebrae.

We were lucky the butcher sold us the frankfurters.

Fun, Fact and Fiction

Government officials tend to be slim, in the opinion of a noted anthropologist, which may explain Winston Churchill's hitherto inexplicable capacity for work. He is really four thin men standing close together.

Suggesting that some day women may run the world, a Yale scientist hastens to add that this "isn't a prediction, nor even a warning." Nor even news.

A Washington correspondent says President Truman acts as if anybody who snipes at one of his supporters is really aiming at him, which is the way the deer must feel occasionally while the hunters are shooting one another.

It was their first quarrel, and the sordid subject was money. "Before we were married," she cried bitterly, "you told me you were well off."

"I was," he snarled, "but I didn't know it."

Even if you don't read, a library is a pleasant spot these days. The number of places where peace and quiet are the rule is getting smaller and smaller.

Photography Salon Creating Interest Here

Victoria Camera Club's 11th International Salon of Photography is creating considerable interest in Victoria this week. The salon will be open from 2 to 5.30 and 7 to 10 p.m. daily through Sunday—in the Lower Lounge of the Empress Hotel. Above, viewing pictures in the exhibit, are R. S. Evans, L. A. Dabelstein and Mrs. M. L. Andrews. (Colonist photo by Bud Kinsman.)

Photographers Ask Stricter Licensing

City professional photographers would like a little more protection from transient and "second-rate" cameramen in return for the fee they pay under the city Trades License Bylaw. In a brief presented to the committee, spokesman John Price said photographers felt the city licensing department did not give "sufficient scrutiny" to applications for licenses. The brief states that the bylaw should be amended so that the street address of the applicant is included, and this should also be in a commercial zone. In addition, the photographers asked vigorous enforcement of certain provisions of the bylaw with respect to issuance of licenses. "Many people are carrying on business outside commercial zones," said Mr. Price. "We feel that we are not getting the protection we should get under our license."

Blood Effort Cheered

It took 600 bottles of soft drinks, 11 pounds of coffee, hundreds of cookies and two days of hard work, but Red Cross officials ended up with one of the most successful blood clinics ever held here. They wished to thank, too, the beverage company which donated the soft drink and the Junior Chamber of Commerce for providing free transportation.

Up to the official closing time of 9.30 p.m. yesterday, 570 Victorians crossed the threshold of the Red Cross headquarters on Fort Street to give their blood. Red Cross workers said they were "very delighted" with the "splendid response" of Victorians, who ranged in age from 18 to 65.

The California wine industry has protested B.C.'s ban on its product.

Wineries have lodged their protest with Attorney General Gordon S. Wismer. Mr. Wismer said yesterday the matter was "under consideration."

The U.S. wine men say B.C. is violating the Geneva Agreements on Trade and Tariffs, recently revised at Torquay, Nations signing the agreements pledged themselves not to discriminate against one another's products.

Canadian liquor commissioners only recently revoked an inter-provincial agreement not to stock liquor in excess of 50 per cent.

Expansion Planned For Cellulose Plant

PRODUCTION of the Columbia Cellulose plant at Port Edward will be stepped up by 50 per cent soon.

Harold Blanche, president, said in New York yesterday the company has let contracts valued at $2,000,000 for new equipment, machinery and buildings to Dominion Construction Company.

The addition will increase Columbia's capacity from 200 to 300 tons a day.

A new water treatment system is being installed and a sixth carbon dioxide digester is being set up.

Recreation Program Urged for City

The Recreation Council of Greater Victoria will ask the city to form a civic recreation commission which would establish the policy of complete recreation programs for Victorians.

The council suggests that the body could be either an elected or appointed group, or a combination of both, with planning handled by trained recreation director and staff "most of whom are already on civic payroll."

A letter recommending the move to the mayor and aldermen, is signed by president of the rec-

There are 115 such commissions in as many cities across Canada, states Mr. Reeve, and the "sum total of delinquency, alcoholism and drug incidence all point out the need of adequate directed recreation."

Civic authority would be needed to secure use of park and school facilities and in order that programs could be financed by taxation, he states.

Rommel Film May Settle Army Debates

By MAJOR ROY FARRETT

It is a safe bet that every soldier and ex-soldier in Victoria will take in the picture "Desert Fox" currently showing in Victoria. The picture deals with the life of Field Marshal Erwin Rommel.

The German general was a brilliant leader and a good soldier. And because of the ties which seem to bind all good soldiers, regardless of nationality, he was greatly respected by our own troops as well as his own.

It is not surprising that Rommel has been the chief topic of conversation among local troops for the past week. Nearly every local army unit has made arrangements to parade to the theatre to see the picture. The Canadian Scottish attended in a body on opening night, this week.

Aside from Rommel's qualities as a general, there are other reasons for local army interest. The controversy of Rommel versus Montgomery is one which has occupied military minds ever since El Alamein.

PARADE TO THEATRE

The champions of each general are about equally divided and the arguments pro and con have almost led to blows in more than one local canteen.

The 5th B.C.A. Coast Regiment and the 75th H.A.A. Regiment are planning to parade to the picture at 8:30 p.m. today along with the R.C.A. brass band. On Tuesday evening, 8 A.A.O.R. and the 40th Technical Squadron will attend. Some of the mystery of Rommel will likely be cleared up after these visits by local units.

In spite of the fact that Rommel is a defeated general and that his famous "Afrika Korps" was completely smashed, his mastery tactics even in retreat made his position in history secure. His fight against the Hitler regime, during the final months of the war, has dispelled all of the hatred normally accorded an enemy.

His death by ordered suicide illustrates to most local military men the futility of living under a police state. Rommel's name will long be toasted in Victoria's army messes and canteens.

Long Meeting of Brewery Workers Brings No Sign of Strike Solution

There was no sign of a break in the beer strike last night, following a three-hour meeting here of Local 280 of the Brewery Workers, (C.I.O.-C.L.I.) attended by Edward Sims, international representative.

Decision of the union, it was reported, was to hold firm for 35 cents an hour. The companies offer of 25 cents was rejected some time ago.

Some outlying beer parlors, including the Chalet at Deep Cove, have beer supplies left, but on the whole Vancouver Island is "dry" as far as local beer is concerned.

According to reports, there is little possibility of negotiations being reopened before a minimum of another ten days.

Reds Deny Seeking Cease Fire Now, But Want Line Determined for Future

MUNSAN, Korea, Nov. 16 (Friday) (AP).—Communist negotiators denied Thursday they sought a cease-fire in Korea before the formal signing of an armistice, but continued to insist that the United Nations agree to a provisional stop-shooting line now.

The apparently paradoxical Communist stand was pointed out sharply in a United Nations communiqué Thursday night. It reported no progress Thursday in a 3½-hour sub-committee session at Panmunjom.

However, the sub-committee delegates scheduled their 23rd meeting at Panmunjom for 11 a.m. today (12 p.m. Thursday, PST).

The Communist Peiping radio, quoting a Korean front dispatch, complained that recent conference talks have been held under the menace of heavy enemy fire.

It said American shells "hurled through the skies at the edge of the conference zone."

The Red radio also asserted "waves" of enemy troops attacked Red positions southwest of Panmunjom.

In the past the Reds have frequently fallen back on such charges when conference talks were stalemated.

At Thursday's session Maj. Gen. Henry L. Hodes, chief of the U.N. sub-committee of two, called on the Communists to drop their insistence on a provisional buffer line across Korea.

"With this eliminated," said Hodes, "your proposals would be in intent and purpose identical. I propose that we formulate a proposal on this basis."

Sanger Death Details Given Inquiry Board

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C., Nov. 15 (CP).—Thirty minutes after Dr. H. McKenzie had prescribed adrenalin for Daniel Sanger, a murder suspect, he died at Oakalla Prison Farm Sept. 13.

This was the evidence given by Dr. McKenzie, attending doctor at Oakalla Prison Farm, before a session of a provincial board inquiring into the Sanger case here today.

Sanger had been committed for trial on a charge of murdering Gwen Doris Casswell of Victoria.

Dr. McKenzie said he examined Sanger on the second day after he was admitted to the jail and found him suffering from cardiac asthma and Sanger told him he had suffered from a heart ailment for years.

The doctor said he had considered sending Sanger to a Vancouver hospital, but the man was in no condition to make the journey and was placed in the jail infirmary.

N. D. S. Pearson, first aid man and X-ray technician, notified the doctor on the evening of Sept. 30 that Sanger's condition was serious and Dr. McKenzie prescribed adrenalin.

Sanger was dead when the doctor arrived at the jail a half hour later.

Biochemist Addresses Rotarians

Dr. Peter Gee-Pan Mar, biochemist at St. Joseph's Hospital, was guest speaker yesterday at a regular meeting of the Victoria Rotary Club.

He told the Rotarians of a large international chemists' convention which he recently attended at New York.

Playing tag with fish

If you meet a lobster wearing an aluminum tag, don't waste sympathy. It wasn't hauled up for parking opposite a hydrant. The tag was put there by the National Fisheries Board which is sleuthing out marine life stories. A salmon, so decorated, was recaptured after four years and a lobster after ten. The tags were still in excellent condition.

Aluminum's ability to withstand the elements is one of the advantages which make it increasingly popular for walls, roofs and architectural embellishments. An aluminum cornice in Montreal was taken down recently — undamaged after being exposed to the weather since 1895. Aluminum Company of Canada, Ltd. (Alcan).

SURE, a trim new Buick makes a mighty pretty picture when you see it in your driveway, or watch it wheel by. But if you could get a mechanic's-eye view of this big, broad beauty as it sits on a lift, you'd see an impressive picture of rugged brawn that makes Buicks give such a good account of themselves on the road. You'd see the full-length torque-tube drive that firms the whole power relay system, and steadies your going like a giant hand beneath you. You'd see all four wheels cushioned by stout coil springs that are completely service-free, practically break-proof—and a principal reason for the ever-level Buick ride. But mainly, you'd see the massive foundation that backbones every Buick—the deep, wide, X-member frame that's rugged as a rock, and a brute for strength.

Engine, transmission, drive and axle are casted in integral unitary pieces.
*Standard on Roadmaster, optional on Super and Wildcat.

So when you look at the beauty of a Buick—the big mileage power of its valve-in-head Fireball Engine—and the money saving ability of its Dynaflo Drive*—don't overlook the tough stamina that goes with it all. And whether you're looking at a Buick Custom, a Buick Super or a mighty Roadmaster, don't

NO OTHER CAR PROVIDES ALL THIS:

Beauty and You

By MARION MATTHEWS

As you look at the picture of a beautiful woman, you will find that she is not only beautiful but also healthy. This is because she has a good complexion, which is the result of a healthy body. A healthy body is one that is free from all diseases and is in a state of perfect balance. This is the only way to achieve true beauty.

Pro Patria Auxiliary To Have Busy Season

The Pro Patria Auxiliary, which has been active since its formation, is now entering its busiest season. The auxiliary is composed of women who are dedicated to the service of their country. They are working hard to raise funds for the war effort and to provide relief for the needy. Their efforts are greatly appreciated by the community.

St. Luke's Bazaar

The St. Luke's Bazaar, which is being held at the St. Luke's Church, is now open. The bazaar is a great opportunity for the community to come together and support a good cause. There are many items for sale, including clothing, books, and household goods. The proceeds from the bazaar will be used to support the church and its various programs.

West made the lead which was, of course, logical and normal from his holding. The club king. He could scarcely foresee that the blank ace was coming down in dummy's.

East, without even thinking, followed suit to the first trick with his fourspot and right there the defense disintegrated! Declarer entered his hand with a Nurse Jane did not think of the closet door as a "window" through which Clarence fled. She had crept into the cellar, and it was, as you may have guessed, Clarence, who in hiding himself, had knocked aside some of the boxes in the jam closet.

"But I don't guess anybody could find the noise I made," thought she. "The door is closed, and no one is coming down here. I am safely hidden in among these boxes. This must be a sort of closet. It smells like jam. I wonder if I can find any jam to eat?"

So she crept through the jam closet door, and found a box of jam. She ate a few spoonfuls, and then she crept back into the jam closet, and closed the door. She was fast asleep.

As quick as a wink Nurse Jane opened the closet door and looked in it. She had locked in the boy.

But something is going to happen. You may read about it in the story tomorrow. But I hope the egg-beater will help the coffee pot make a potato pie for the story. You may be to take to the puppy's part.

Building Fund of Church Gets $6,000 From Will

Christ Church Cathedral building fund receives $6,000 and seven Victoria charitable and youth organizations will have many thousands each from the estate of J. C. Bridgman, probated at $342,259 in Supreme Court.

Mr. Bridgman, 77, well-known Victoria real estate man for more than 50 years, died in Veterans' Hospital in September.

In addition to the $6,000 bequest to Christ Church Cathedral, the will provides $1,000 to Jack Rowe, 3327 Richmond Avenue and $150 to Mrs. Mary Spouse, 899 Craig flower Road.

Life interests in the other two quarters go to Mr. Bridgman's brother, James Ewing Bridgman, 75, and his sister, Mrs. Mary Dugan, 74, both in England. A nephew, John Dugan, also in England, will, on the death of Mrs. Marian Agnes Bridgman, receive one-half of her share, and on the

Potato Ration Looms in City As Supply Low

If supplies of local potatoes on hand were freely sold, there wouldn't be a home-grown "Murphy" in the city, it is estimated. This was stated Thursday by an official of the B.C. Coast Vegetable Marketing Board, who made it clear, however, that there was no chance that Victorians would go spudless.

"There is no doubt of a shortage in local potatoes due to the summer drought," he said. "They will have to be doled out to a certain degree. That is also true of Alberta potatoes, which are in very short supply because of adverse weather there."

He pointed out that there were plenty of U.S. potatoes available and that city wholesalers have been buying them in large quantities.

Twenty tons of the Oregon variety were landed here Wednesday from the Mt. Chinook.

Man Sentenced For Bad Check

James Sutherland, 35, Victoria Auto Court, was sentenced to 30 days in jail by Magistrate H. C. Hall in court yesterday on a charge of obtaining money by false pretences.

Sutherland passed a $90 check on Leonard Stelck of Stelck's Hardware without sufficient bank funds to cover it.

Magistrate Hall said he was giving a lenient sentence, in view of the fact that restitution has been made and this is a first offense.

Driver Fined $35 or Jail For Collision

Albert G. Jones, 3228 Grant, was fined $35 or five days in jail yesterday on a dangerous driving charge arising out of a collision between his car and one driven by Cecil Duke, 870 Brett on Oct. 16.

The cars were in collision at Saanich and Darwin Roads and both cars received considerable damage. Duke was treated in hospital for a broken nose. Jones told court he was approaching Saanich Road on Darwin and underestimated the speed of Duke's car. He said he accelerated to make a left turn in front of Duke's car "to try to get clear."

Police Unsure, Court Drops Driving Charge

Charge against Allan D. Wilson, 2230 Willows, of driving while his ability to do so was impaired by alcohol was dismissed by Magistrate H. C. Hall in police court yesterday. Wilson was arrested by Saanich police for speeding and later arrested again on the new charge.

Magistrate Hall told Wilson: "The police must have had a good opportunity for judging your driving ability when they pursued you for speeding, and the fact that they released you after charging you, and let you drive away, indicates that they were unsure of themselves the second time they arrested you."

Creal Burial Set Saturday

Funeral services for Rev. Howard Hubert Creal, who died Wednesday at St. Joseph's Hospital, will be held 10 a.m. Saturday at St. Paul's Naval and Garrison Church. Remains will be taken there today. Burial will be at Holy Trinity Churchyard, Patricia Bay. Dr. Creal is survived by his widow and three children at 610 Island Highway.

Dr. Creal was rector at St. Paul's and retired a year ago.

Staunton in Virginia was the first municipality to use the commission form of government under a city manager.

Hills Warns Against Peace Petitions

Even if recommended by the Dean of Canterbury or the Pope himself, Victorians and other people of the democracies shouldn't sign peace petitions.

So said Rev. William Hills, in commenting on his address, "Let's Get It Straight," delivered to Oak Bay Kiwanians last night in the Oak Bay Beach Hotel. Mr. Hills is pastor of St. George the Martyr Church, Cadboro Bay. During the talk, itself, he said to Kiwanians: "Don't sign peace petitions. They are a snare and a delusion which only pave the way for trouble."

Mr. Hills said he would rather see petitions which supported "justice, law and order," adding, "The Soviet-inspired peace campaign was only begun to pave the way for an attack on the West." He said the object was to represent Russia as the only champion of peace and so work from within on the love of peace possessed by the ordinary people of the West.

Stressing that Russia is "no colossus," Mr. Hills pointed out:

1. Represented in the Soviet's 200,000,000 population are a great many children who—because of Russia's high death rate—will never reach military age.

2. There are 37,000,000 "Russians of military age, but there are 33,000,000 Americans of military age.

3. Half of the Russian population works on the land so that the other half may eat, whereas only one-sixth of the U.S. population works on the land.

Victoria Yachtsmen Attending Seattle Talks

MARINE AND TRAVEL NEWS

J. Matthews and H. W. Miller, rear commodore and staff captain, respectively, of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club will attend an annual meeting of the International Power Boat Association in Seattle tomorrow.

The gathering will be at the Queen City Yacht Club head.

quarters, and will conclude with a banquet that night at the Seattle Tennis Club where prizes will be awarded to various winners of I.P.B.A. races held this year.

Plans will be made for next year's big power boat race. This year's event was staged from Vancouver to Seattle. Mr. Miller for some years has been a member of the international group's rules committee.

The power boat association comprises 17 yacht clubs of the Pacific northwest.

Ancient methods of smoking and curing fish among British Columbia Indians are now giving way to the pressure cooker and canning apparatus.

For centuries the Indians have smoked and sun-dried salmon for use during winter and spring. But now, according to the federal fisheries department, the younger generation is making itself felt and Indians are putting up their fish in the modern way.

Last year, it is reported, some 1,800 Indian families took salmon matrices showed that in the Yale-Merritt area of the Fraser River alone, nearly 75 per cent of the Indian salmon catch is now home-canned.

Under special federal fishery regulations for the province, any Indian may receive a free fishing permit to catch salmon to be used by himself and his family, but for no other purpose.

The Indians have an intimate knowledge of the British Columbia rivers and they show an uncanny skill in the choice of locations to fish along the ordinary commercial fishing boundaries.

Spearing is still done but the great majority of the Indians now use some form of net. Some Indians still use a dugout canoe, while others have taken to more modern gasoline-powered vessels.

During summer months travellers between Victoria and Vancouver often see Indians in dugouts fishing for salmon in turbulent Active Pass which separates Galiano and Mayne Islands.

FERRY SOUGHT

A concentrated effort to have a ferry service linking Vancouver Island with the Gulf Islands is now being made by a special committee of the Chamber of Commerce headed by Walter S. Miles.

The seven-man committee has already met once and will present an interim report at today's Chamber of Commerce directors' meeting at noon in the Empress Hotel.

The committee will meet again at 11 a.m. Monday in the chamber-board room.

AORANGI DUE

The Canadian-Australasian Line's Mv. Aorangi is scheduled to reach Victoria Nov. 29 on another voyage from the Antipodes, according to C.P.R. officials.

Time of arrival and a list of the ship's passengers will be announced later.

The liner will dock at Ogden Point and as usual will go to Vancouver after discharging some passengers and freight here.
